THREE ACM FACULTY, STAFF MEMBERS EARN HIGHER EDUCATION AWARDS

Allegany College of Maryland recently recognized three faculty and staff members as recipients of John and Suanne Roueche Excellence Awards for 2018. Sponsored by the League for Innovation in the Community College, the Roueche award honors outstanding contributions and leadership excellence in higher education. ACM's three awardees, seated from left to right, are Kathy Condor, Chris Ruppenkamp and Cheryl Nelson. Condor is director of continuing health and human services education. Ruppenkamp is athletics and physical education technician II. Cheryl Nelson is professor of nursing and director of ACM's Nurse Managed Wellness Clinic. The three award winners were recognized by the ACM Board of Trustees at a recent meeting. Also pictured, from left, are: Dr. Cynthia S. Bambara, ACM president; Kim B. Leonard, trustees chair; Jane A. Belt, trustees vice chair. John Roueche, who formerly directed the Community College Leadership Program at the University of Texas, is president of the Roueche Graduate Center at National American University. The League for Innovation in the Community College has more than 800 member institutions in a dozen countries.
